Foreword

It is with great pleasure that we send our 1946 Dahlia Catalogue to you.

Lots of water has flown under the bridge since we started growing dahlias commercially sixteen years ago. Having survived about the worst depression the world has ever known we now emerge from the most critical period in the history of our firm, World War II, which took yours truly, except for remote control, away from the business for three years, and as far as the European Theater of Operations. Need I add that The Rainbow Gardens rolled on as effectively as it had before under the excellent guidance of my wife.

As you read through our catalogue may I suggest your close attention to our 1946 introduction, "Satan's Disciple", also to our European introductions, which as far as I know are the first dahlias to be imported from Europe since before the War. We offer our personal recommendations for many of these foreign varieties as I have seen most of them growing in France.

Sincerely,

THE RAINBOW GARDENS

J. D. Burns

The Rainbow Garden's Great Introduction for 1946

“SATAN’S DISCIPLE”

Here is a dahlia that is worthy of the most conspicuous spot in everybody’s garden. Regarded by many authorities as the best red exhibition dahlia that we have today. Others claim that “Satan’s Disciple” is the best dahlia that they have ever grown.

“Satan’s Disciple” has won for two consecutive years as the best bloom in the show, at Kingston, Pa., with blooms well over 12 in. in diameter and better than 6 in. in depth. It is also on Dudley’s Eastern Honor Roll and Col. Eddy’s Pacific Coast Honor Roll. Roy W. Webb writes that “SATAN’S DISCIPLE” for him is the best dahlia that he has ever grown, with foliage the nearest thing to sand-paper that he has ever seen in a dahlia. Size is 10 in. as grown in his garden without any “blowing up” at all and he has cut blooms that were better than twelve inches in diameter from plants that had no feeding at all after planting. He goes on to say that centers are always good with no signs of popping. Col. Eddy growing “Satan’s Disciple” in California writes us as follows: “Satan’s Disciple” has bloomed and is a “Knockout”, Leaves are like those of a burdock plant. Quoting Col. Eddy in the Flower Grower magazine; “Here is one of the largest and best dahlias of the year. Can be grown to 12 in. without coddling.”

Entire flower scarlet-red, unopened florets in the center a little darker. Flowering habit good, stem to 14 in., medium to extra heavy. Size of flowers 10 to 13 in., depth 5 to 6 in. Plant height 5 to 6 ft.

Root $25.00 net

Plant $12.50

Note: We do not recommend forced feeding for “Satan’s Disciple” as it has a tendency to respond to heavy feeding by softening the necks of the stems causing some of the blooms to tilt down.

Our 1946 Introductions from Europe

The dahlias listed below represent some of the best introductions coming from Europe since before the War, and as far as we know they are the first. They have all the fine characteristics common with the foreign dahlia, long, slender, rigid stems, excellent flower formation and beautiful color. We believe they are worthy of a place in our American Gardens and are sure they will take more than their share of prizes in the Show Room.

HINTS ON SUCCESSFUL DAHLIA CULTURE

TIME—The proper time for the planting of dahlias in this latitude is from May 1st until June 15th. For exhibition purposes we recommend planting about June 10th.

SOIL—Good dahlias can be grown in almost any kind of soil. Plant in a sunny location. Prepare soil by deep spading or plowing. The ideal soil for Dahlias is a light friable loam, so if your soil is very sandy add plenty of humus, if heavy add sand or ashes and humus.

PLANTING OF ROOTS—Scoop out soil about six inches deep. Drive a stake at edge of hole to support plant in the latter stages of its growth, particularly when in flower. Lay root flat in hole with the eye upward and cover with two inches of finely pulverized soil, gradually filling in the hole to level with the ground, as the plant grows.

PLANTING OF GREEN PLANTS—When your plants are received remove from package and soak for a few minutes in enough water to cover the paper pots, in order to freshen the plants after their journey. Set out plants in the evening or on a cloudy day after removing plant from pot. Preparation of soil for plants are the same as for roots. Shading potted plants for the first few days after planting during the warmest part of the day is advised.

CULTIVATION—Cultivating the soil between the plants will prove very beneficial in controlling weeds and conserving moisture. As the plants grow larger, cultivation should be shallower in order not to destroy the surface feeder roots.

WATERING—During prolonged draughts water thoroughly every week or ten days as needed. To control red spider spray the plants forcibly with water paying particular attention to the under side of the leaves.

INSECTS—A weekly spraying with some good insecticide from the time your plants are a few inches high will usually control injurious insects.

DISBUDDING—For the best flowers and stems disbudding must be practiced. When the plants appear leave only one stalk. After three sets of leaves have formed pinch out the center of the plant. Very shortly at the base of the leaves laterals or suckers will appear. In time, they will be the branch, stem and flower. As these branches develop a cluster of buds will appear on the top of the branch. Remove all but the terminal bud. Lateral or sucker growths below this cluster of buds should also be removed, leaving two or four sets of laterals to develop into new flowering branches.

FERTILIZATION—An application of a low nitrogen (About 2 per cent) but high phosphate rate fertilizer beneath the root or plant at planting time should maintain the plant until buds appear. At that time a handful of good potato fertilizer (4-8-8) should be placed around the plant, but not touching it and raked into the soil. Cow or horse manure spread over the garden in the fall after the dahlias are dug will greatly increase the productiveness. Rye or some other good cover crop planted in the fall will also be very beneficial.

DIGGING & STORAGE—By November 1st even if frost has not killed the tops of your plants the roots should be dug and stored for the winter. Care must be taken not to strain or break the necks of the root. Cut stalks to within 2 inches of the root and store in a cool cellar in boxes lined thickly with newspaper. Dry sand covering the roots will aid in bringing them safely through the winter.

If your present method of storage is satisfactory disregard the above as every cellar presents its own problem and a method that would apply to one person would prove very unsatisfactory to another. In the Spring when the eyes show plainly divide the roots with a sharp knife or pruning shears making sure that every division has one or more eyes.

PLEASE NOTE:—The above hints are intended to assist the amateur in growing good dahlias. It is assumed that the professional grower is familiar with the culture of dahlias.

DAHLIA SEED

There is no thrill in growing dahlias that can compare with raising your own from seed. The possibility exists that you may be lucky enough to originate a far better dahlia than any other on the market today. We offer seed produced in California, and taken from large exhibition type dahlias only. They will flower and produce a clump of roots the first season.

20 seed, $1.00    50 seed, $2.50    100 seed, $5.00

To those who would prefer seedling pot plants, we can supply seedlings (from the above seed) ready to plant out, at $3.00 per dozen net.

ROOTED CUTTINGS

If you have the facilities to handle rooted cuttings we recommend that you try ours. We believe that our rooted cuttings and green plants are equal and in many cases far superior to any that are produced in this country. Rooted cuttings are the most reasonable way you can purchase dahlias as they are one-third less than the price of plants.

THE BIG FOUR COLLECTION

Has proven so popular in the past that we offer it again this year. A collection of four outstanding varieties in either plants or rooted cuttings. This year the BIG FOUR consists of one plant each of Essie Smith, V-Day, Albert Kilgore, and Moscow, all 1945 introductions that proved so successful the past season. A $12.50 plant value for only $8.25 net. Or rooted cuttings for $5.25 net. In ordering just ask for the BIG FOUR.
